International Affairs - FY 2010 Budget

US Department of State

May 8, 2009

The President's FY 2010 International Affairs Budget for the Department of State, the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), and other foreign affairs agencies provides the resources to renew America's global leadership through diplomacy and foreign assistance that enhances our security, advances our interests, and reflects our values.

Remarks by the President on Reducing Spending in the Budget

The White House

May 7, 2009

I believe we can and must do exactly that. Over the course of our first hundred days in office, my administration has taken aggressive action to confront a historic economic crisis. We're doing everything that we can to create jobs and to get our economy moving while building a new foundation for lasting prosperity -- a foundation that invests in quality education, lowers health care costs, and develops new sources of energy powered by new jobs and industries.

Terminations, Reductions and Savings. Budget of the U.S. Government Fiscal Year 2010

Office of Management and Budget

Terminations, Reductions and Savings identifies programs that do not accomplish their intended objectives, are not efficient, or that replicate efforts being completed by another initiative—and recommends these programs for either termination or reduction. There have been 121 terminations, reductions, and other areas of savings identified that will save approximately $17 billion next year alone.
